1: Introduction

Pegazus is a charity-oriented token, There have been a lot of RFI type projects lately but none of them had an actual utility that would make the project useful longterm. Our solution is to make a token that will not only apply a 6% burn fee and a 1% redistribution fee, but also swap 1% of tokens from every transaction to BNB and send it to Pegazus Donation wallet and then send to the Binance charity donation wallet.

PEGazus shares this viewpoint. As cryptocurrency continues to grow in popularity and versatility, it's evolving into a tool which allows us to approach traditional problems from a new perspective.

Using this token as our vantage point, PEGazus is enacting innovative yet realistic options which will allow us to improve as many lives as possible. While there are several charity tokens based on specific humanitarian issues, PEGazus is focused on the bigger picture.

We have a vision of a world where technology becomes the great equalizer, the means to granting prosperity for all. We invite our investors to join us on our journey to building this new reality.

Pegazus is introducing PEG, a new cryptocurrency (BEP-20 Token) and smart contract ecosystem.

Problem

Generally, people would say that charitable causes are always a good thing, but not everyone. Some argue charitable causes can be inefficient, ineffective or corruptible even.

Some people think causes can lead to terrible results even when the charity is set up with the very best of intentions. Charity may lead to favouritism, not fairness Charities, not unreasonably, choose to give to causes that appeal to them.

But these are not necessarily the causes where there is the greatest need. Charity structure Most charities do great work, however due to bureaucracy and lack of transparency, the sectors credibility and confidence has been eroded in recent years.

Problems with current charity structures include: • Inefficient, on average only 15-20% of donations actually get to the recipients. • The process is slow for recipients to receive funds. • Decisions are centralised and unaccountable to donors/fund raisers. • No transparency regarding the usage of donations.

Charities often target symptoms, not causes When charities help the recipients with funds, it often doesn't do much to deal with the causes of their issues. This can only be solved by campaigning for short- and long-term continuous improvements which in turn will provide viable evolutionary solutions

Our Solution

PEGazus seeks to change the existing charity environment using the power of cryptocurrencies and decentralising the decision process. Each transaction will be charged 1% tax fee and deposited in a Pegazus donation wallet, then donated to Binance Charity Wallet.

Transparency and accountability The charity wallet for PEGazus will be publicly viewable on the block chain so that holders are not only aware of the funds raised, but how the funds are being spent.

Whenever donations are sent to recipients, the transactions are captured and added to the publicly searchable database on our website. This creates a level of transparency and accountability that doesn't exist in any current charity structures.

2. Our Mission

But these are not necessarily the causes where there is the greatest need. Charity structure Most charities do great work, however due to bureaucracy and lack of transparency, the sectors credibility and confidence has been eroded in recent years.

Problems with current charity structures include:

- Inefficient, on average only 15-20% of donations actually get to the recipients.
- The process is slow for recipients to receive funds.
- Decisions are centralised and unaccountable to donors/fund raisers.
- No transparency regarding the usage of donations.

Donations and Charities

We have incredible respect for the organizations and institutions who dedicate themselves to helping others. That's why we are ready to open a community wallet, which can receive contributions from investors and team members a like, and solidify a donation schedule.

Authenticity is one of our founding principles, so you can rest assured that charitable donations will always be accurately recorded, publicly posted, and easily accessible for further review.

Many of the charitable tokens gaining attention in the cryptosphere are focused on very specific goals. Unfortunately, these seemingly separate issues are not so simple.

While each singular cause is vital to assisting those it affects, this format doesn't acknowledge how deeply complex and fundamentally intertwined we all are. Until we start addressing the systemic reasons behind humanitarian crises, our society will continue struggling with temporary fixes instead of actual solutions

Charities often target symptoms, not causes When charities help the recipients with funds, it often doesn't do much to deal with the causes of their issues. This can only be solved by campaigning for short- and long-term continuous improvements which in turn will provide viable evolutionary solutions

We all know that the health of our body is important, but what about the health of our mind? Over 10% of the population experiences significant symptoms from a mental illness. But even though mental illnesses are treatable, most do not have access to appropriate care.

Cancer research is a cornerstone of medical work internationally. However, this support does not extend equally to all varieties of cancer. There is a desperate need for funding and focus on less commercialized types of cancer and experimental treatment
